BLTZ × GETTY IMAGES / DISCUSSION PROPOSAL

One image. A career of possibilities.

BLTZ connects approved imagery to an athlete's permanent career identity, helping fans and producers discover a specific use and request the right license.

Getty imagery →	Athlete + career moment →	Permitted use →	License revenue + attribution

THREE PROPOSED USES / WHO BUYS / HOW GETTY EARNS

A / Print on demand

Approved image in Locker → Fan discovers career moment → Fan buys licensed print

Potential buyer Fan, through a Getty-approved print partner

Getty receives the agreed license fee or sales-based payment. Player participation and fulfillment costs require separate agreed terms.

B / Player podcast

Player selects career image → Producer requests episode use → Licensed image in video episode

Potential buyer Player's media business or podcast producer

Getty receives a license fee quoted for the episode and approved channels. Podcast income is separate from image licensing.

C / Player documentary

Producer discovers career story → Requests image for a scene → Licensed still in documentary

Potential buyer Production company or archival producer

Getty receives a license fee based on the production's intended use. Additional uses may require additional licensing.

Proposed 50-player pilot

50 opt-in players · Up to 3 approved stills each · Maximum 150 unique images

Begin with approved Locker display and selected use cases; expand only after clearance. Duration, budget and success targets to agree with Getty.

Validate player demand → Agree approved uses + pricing → Clear imagery → Launch + measure → Joint review

DEMAND

EXPOSURE

Discussion proposal, not an existing Getty agreement. Each use needs appropriate approval and a use-specific quote. Views are engagement, not license revenue. Creator attribution does not itself create payment entitlement; royalties, referral fees and player shares apply only if contracted.
